Openings For Girls at NYA School in Maine

Nearly 500 girls will be trained free as aviation mechanics and other war workers by the National Youth Administration at Quoddy, Maine, Leon J. Kowal, Regional Administrator of the NYA, announced recently.

The NYA has at Quoddy the largest war production training center of its kind in the country, Mr. Kowal said. For the past two years it has been run for boys and 600 are there now. The first contingent of girls arrived at Quoddy on Wednesday, February 3, 1943. From then on it will be co-ed, and if enough girls and boys come will have a total enrollment of 900. That is its capacity.

This is what the National Youth Administration offers:

Free transportation to Quoddy from anywhere in New York State for girls between 16 and 24. Free transportation home, if the girl completes her course satisfactorily. Quoddy is near Eastport, Maine.

Free lodging in dormitories in Quoddy village, which is a community run by the NYA. Free meals.

Free training which runs 10 weeks to three months. The average girl should plan to stay three months, officials say, to take full advantage of the courses.

Pay is $10.80 a month, which is enough for spending money.

Practical assurance of a job in war industry when a girl finishes her training.

Almost every girl who does well with the course will be eligible at any army aviation base for a starting salary of $1,440 a year, Mr. Kowal said. That averages $27.69 a week as a minimum, and many girls get more.

Training will be given at Quoddy in aviation and repair, which means the fundamentals of aviation maintenance in aviation engine maintenance and repair, aviation steel metal work and aviation instruments. This last course is the only one in the aviation group that applicants can not sign up for. They will be selected.

In addition, there will be courses in radio, drafting, general sheet metal work, machine shop operators and welding.

Application should be made to William J. Smith, NYA Office, City Hall, Plattsburg, N. Y.

Use Old Sweaters

Many of the attractive multi-colored sweaters now in vogue are made of the remnants of two or more old or outworn knitted garments. Before the castoffs are taken apart, they should be washed in soap and water, and the wool will be easier and pleasanter to handle.

Chocolate Eggs Are Out For Duration

Chocolate covered Easter eggs which children used to hunt for among the green straw grass lining their Easter baskets, are out for the duration—as is the grass itself, and the cotton chicks and rabbits which were made in Japan. Order M 14 of the War Production Board, issued on December 15, 1942, prohibits the manufacture of novelty candy "made wholly or partially with a chocolate coating."

However, the baskets themselves are still available and there will be plenty of colored eggs since the vegetable dyes used for them are not on the war-essential list. Candy egg too, will be on the market, though not in great numbers, and stuffed animals and chickens will take the place of the Japanese variety.
